The Journey of Chocolate

One of the most popular foods of all time is chocolate. The chocolate we eat today is made from many different ingredients, but the most important ingredient is the cacao bean. The story of the cacao bean and its long journey to stores and supermarkets all over the world started hundreds of years ago in Mexico. Cacao trees need hot and humid weather.

The Maya were the first people to eat cacao beans. They picked cacao beans from wild trees. They made a drink from cacao beans and exchanged the beans for other goods. They also used cacao beans for their religious ceremonies. Mayan merchants traveled north and introduced cacao beans to the Aztec people. Soon the cacao bean became a part of the Aztecs' lives. They used it as a drink, in religious ceremonies, and even as money. The Aztecs could not grow cacao trees because of their dry climate.

By the 1700s, there were chocolate shops in many European cities. In 1847, a company called Fry's of England made the first chocolate bar. At first, chocolate bars were very expensive, but soon ordinary people were buying chocolate in stores all over the world.
