Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Do You Really Need It?

Every day, people see hundreds of advertisements—on TV, social media, and even on their phones. These ads try to convince us that we need to buy new clothes, phones, or even snacks. Sometimes, we buy things we don't really need just because they look attractive or trendy. This habit is called impulsive buying.

Smart consumers think carefully before they spend their money. They ask themselves: "Do I really need this?" and "Will I still want it next week?" Making a shopping list, comparing prices, and setting a budget can help people spend wisely. In the end, buying less and choosing better helps not only your wallet, but also the environment.
