Respecting others

Respecting others is an important value in our lives. It helps people live together in peace and understanding. We show respect by listening carefully when someone is speaking. Using polite words like “please” and “thank you” is also important. We should respect people even if they are different from us. Helping others when they need support is a kind of respect. We must not laugh at others or hurt their feelings. Respect makes friendships stronger and better. When we respect others, they will respect us too.
